...reported in favor of moving to Histrionic Hall, on Jefferson street, near Third. This was adopted During the latter part of the second official term of the lodge, the increase of members commenced to slacken up, and after a long time ceased entirely, and the same faces only could be seen in the chairs meeting after meeting. For nearly a year the cause faded and members lost interest. Finally they began dropping out, and about 1879 the faithful original charter members tried to check the downward tumble of the lodge, but their efforts were in vain. The meeting time was changed to Tuesday nights, but still the lodge waned, and finally the faithful few members realized the fact that the money for their dues was not sufficient to float the expenses of the lodge. On May 13, 1879, the charter was surrendered, and Louisville Lodge ceased to be an active annex of the grand body of the order. After a lapse of several years, Brother Frank Girard, who then held the office of D. D. E. G. R. of the order. made the city a visit and called a number of the loyal old members together, who petitioned the Grand Lodge to restore their charter. In response to the petition, the charter, books, papers and other paraphernalia were returned, and Louisville Lodge was reorganized, January 9, 1884. With this new start, regular meetings were held. and many new names were added to the roll, among whom were those of the best people of the city. In 1890 Louisville Lodge only had about one hundred members, but they constituted men of untiring energy, proud to be called Elks, and doing all in their power to advance the best interests of the Order. At a regular meeting of the lodge. which was only about two weeks previous to the Grand Lodge meeting at Cleveland. a resolution was passed...
